How do life and disability insurance work?

Life insurance provides a benefit payment to help ensure the people you care about most are provided for when you pass away.

Disability insurance provides benefits to replace a portion of your income to help cover daily living expenses if you become too sick or hurt to work.

Together, they help you and your loved ones pay for the big and little things in life.

After all, if either a death or disability happens, your daily life and the lives of those you love most could change significantly.

What are the options?

Life insurance

Term policies provide coverage for a specific length or term of time.

Permanent policies offer long-term coverage, plus potential for cash value growth.

Disability insurance

Individual Disability Income provides monthly benefits to replace a portion of your income to help you cover daily life expenses if you're unable to work.

DI Retirement Security helps protect your ability to save for retirement.

Is coverage affordable?

Coverage is customizable to meet your needs and budget. For example, a healthy male, age 35, can purchase the following policies:

$250,000 of term life insurance for less than $14 a month.¹

$14
per month

$1,000 of monthly disability insurance benefits for less than $27 a month.²

$22
per month

=

$36
Combined
monthly cost
